... David Bouley on Brushstroke: "Most times we'll continue to evolve. We're putting in a private dining room as well. I'm not sure when it will come about. We're slowly putting it together, but it's clear what we want to do. It will be a dining room that will also be for demonstrations, with windows made of that glass that turns gray or clear when you flip a switch. Sometimes we'll Skype with folks. There will be documentaries, and there may be holograms showing some of the things that are happening in Japan. We want to get to a point in the private room that also corresponds to all the health benefits of this food, or how you can do this at home." —Eater
